

The Tuck School of Business at Dartmouth Faculty Search in International Economics

September, 2011

The Tuck School of Business, Dartmouth College's graduate school of management, anticipates conducting a faculty search in the area of international economics during the 2011/12 academic year. We are open to all ranks from Assistant to Full Professor but are particularly interested in candidates with some research/teaching experience after the Ph.D.

We seek scholars of international economics who can produce research of excellent quality that will have high impact. Candidates must also be able to effectively teach one of our two core MBA level economics courses, either Global Economics for Managers or Managerial Economics. As potential colleagues, we generally look for candidates who can interact effectively with others and make a meaningful intellectual contribution to the school.

The Tuck School of Business, founded in 1900, is consistently ranked among the top 10 U.S. business schools. The Tuck School fosters an environment that is intellectually stimulating and interdisciplinary. We welcome diversity. We look for excellence in both research and teaching and provide ample financial and logistical support in a highly collegial culture as a means to achieve these ends. The School provides faculty with state-of-the-art computer technology enhanced with in-house programming and statistical support. Library and academic coordinator support is generous, as is the funding provided for research assistance and for travel related to either research or teaching.

Chartered in 1761, the town of Hanover is a charming rural New England town that boasts sophisticated educational and cultural resources. The college is the town's largest employer. Residents enjoy a first-rate public school system and an award-winning teaching hospital, among other amenities. Recreational opportunities are abundant all year round, from paddling on the Connecticut River, to golf or skiing at college facilities that are open to the public, to hiking the Appalachian Trail, which runs through town.

Hanover is located in the scenic Upper Valley of the Connecticut River, two hours from Boston, three hours from Montreal, and five hours from New York City.
